The NASB on parallel is good. It is said to be the most literal. I have not researched who says it is the most literal, but there you have it. It makes a good companion to the Message, and I think I like this pairing better than, say, the NIV, for instance. I originally looked for a KJV parallel but found none, and now I can see the reason for ...

This particular combination of the NASB/Parallel Bible has been of great help to me. As a monastic brother, I practice the discipline of Lectio Divina. This involves a slow meditative reading of scripture until we alight upon a phrase or word through which the Lord seems to speak to us personally, we seek to 'rest' in this until we feel the need to move on, (this is a brief description of how it works).
